

lago victims

lago victims are the ones who receive the support they asked for from upstanders and, after becoming survivors, join their aggressors to attack those upstanders. It is well known by the scientific community that the first need victims have is support in their environment. It is always well known that the first barrier to this support is isolating violence, the reprisals that upstanders receive for giving victims support. When victims become survivors due to their own effort and to such support, some of them join their upstanders to support other victims, some of them do not become upstanders but always appreciate their upstanders' support, and some of them join their aggressors and their attacks toward the upstanders who supported them. The last ones are lago victims. They do this for several reasons. In some cases, because they are related to aggressors denounced by new victims who are supported by the same upstanders who supported them.

To cite this reference:

Valls, R., Puigvert, L., Soler-Gallart, M., Pulido, C., & Flecha, R. (2025). lago victims. Este trabajo está licenciado bajo la Licencia Creative Commons Atribución-NoComercialSinDerivadas 4.0 Internacional. Para ver una copia de esta licencia, visita <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/>